

COUNCIL WILL BUILD SEWER LINE, 2,706 FT.

Will Use Talbot Unemployment Relief Money For Project This Winter.

LINE TO CIRCLE COLLEGE GROUNDS

Council voted to construct a sewer line from the end of the present sewer on West Broadway, around land of Gettysburg college to North Washington street, at the regular November meeting at the fire engine house, Monday evening.

The new line, which will serve West Broadway, West Lincoln avenue, several buildings on the college campus and other users, will be 2706 feet in length.

Action to construct the new sewer line was taken after Councilman C. W. Epley informed council that excavation for the improvement would be done with Talbot unemployment relief funds available in Adams county this winter.

By this plan, a saving of $2,706 will be effected, the cost of excavation being estimated at $1 a foot. Council will have to furnish the tile for the job, estimated at $400, dynamite and an air compressor. This was estimated at an additional $200, although some councilmen estimated that this cost may be low in view of the fact that considerable blasting will be required along the line.

Await Approval

Leroy Winebrenner, borough surveyor, presented blue prints of the new sewer line and a comprehensive survey of existing sewer lines in town to council. Copies of these prints have been forwarded to Harrisburg for approval before the work will be started.

The new sewer line will relieve a condition which has confronted council for some time. Several sewers on West Broadway and West Lincoln avenue have been emptying into a small stream which runs parallel with Broadway. This run has been a veritable breeding place for mosquitoes, and it is believed the new sewer line will remedy that condition.

With the assistance of Borough Solicitor J. Donald Swopes, council ironed out a slight controversy which the borough had with the Adams county commissioners during the month, relative to the cost of keeping persons, arrested in Gettysburg, at the jail.

Mr. Swopes informed council that persons arrested for disorderly conduct in Gettysburg have violated a state law and consequently the council must pay the expenses of their incarceration at the jail.

Must Pay Fees

The borough, however, he added, is liable for persons arrested for drunkenness. Council voted to pay the expenses of such violators when committed to jail. The costs in connection with the commitment of prisoners to jail include 50 cents commitment fee, 50 cents discharge fee and 50 cents a day for maintenance.

Bids for the construction of concrete gutters around the dry house at the sewage disposal plant, opened at the meeting, were rejected after considerable discussion, and the matter was left in the hands of the sewer committee. Bids were offered by Michael Tate, William F. Haner and Harry H. Ridinger.

At the suggestion of Burgess C. A. Heiges, council voted to purchase a fingerprint outfit for $12.50. Burgess Heiges also suggested the erection of a stop sign on Chambersburg street for traffic turning into Springs avenue. Although councilmen expressed the opinion that the highway department would not erect such a sign, the matter will be put before the proper officials. Burgess Heiges' report for October showed collections of $73.75.

The salary of Donald L. Hammers, janitor at the fire engine house, was increased $5 a month for the winter months. He now receives $30 a month.

To Improve Corner

George Martin, borough treasurer, reported expenses of $1,753.21 for October, and borough expenses of $43,673.28 for the ten-month period ended November 1.

A suggestion that a new book-keeping system be instituted for the borough accounts at the beginning of next year was referred to the finance committee for a report.

Council voted to cut back the southeast corner of the sidewalk at the corner of Carlisle street and Lincoln avenue so as to increase the width of the intersection, where numerous accidents have occurred.

President A. R. LeVan presided at the meeting which was attended by Councilman Emory C. Williams, D. C. Stallsmith, C. W. Epley, J. B. Wineman, John Newman, William G. Weaver and C. Ray Rupp.

Bishop Brown To Speak At Armistice Day Service Here

Second Annual Observance Here Will Be Held In Local Church Friday Night.

Armistice Day Speaker Here

The second annual Armistice day service will be held in the Memorial church of the Prince of Peace, Baltimore and West High streets Friday evening at 7:30 p. m. The service will be open to the public.

The musical part of the service will be rendered by the choir of St. John's Episcopal church, York, under the direction of the organist and choirmaster, Walter L. Rohrbach. The choir has forty members, and hold high rank among the best choirs in the state. The office of evensong will be intoned by the Rev. Canon Paul S. Atkins, of York.

Visiting clergymen will also assist in the services.

Bishop Brown Speaks

The Right Rev. Wyatt Brown, D. D., Litt. D., bishop of the Harrisburg diocese of the Episcopal church, will be the special preacher. The service will be in charge of the Venerable A. A. Hughes, archdeacon of Harrisburg, and vicar of the Gettysburg parish. Ex-service men of the United States army and navy have been cordially invited to attend.

The Memorial church of the Prince of Peace was built by popular subscription to commemorate the sacrifices of the men who fell at Gettysburg. It contains a large number of memorials, and plans for its further embellishment are being projected. The service on Friday evening is being held in response to a request that the successful service held a year ago, when standing room was at a premium, be repeated.

SAYS TEACHERS IN THIS AREA ARE HIGH TYPE

State Official Comments In Address Before Lions' Club.

LOCAL SCHOOLS WELL EQUIPPED

Adams county in general and Gettysburg in particular were complimented for the high type of their public school teachers by Professor J. K. Bowman, head of the bureau of teacher preparation and certification of the state department of public instruction, in an address at the weekly meeting of the Lions' club at the Hotel Gettysburg, Monday evening. The club celebrated National Education Week.

"In Adams county, with its 212 school teachers, only two of them with less than standard grade certificates, the percentage of teachers with standard or higher certificates, increased from 42.2 per cent in 1921 to 97.5 per cent this year," Professor Bowman said.

Gettysburg has 43 teachers, the speaker continued, none of them with less than standard grade certificates. Of the town's 43 teachers, 19 hold college certificates; 12 normal school certificates and 12 standard certificates, Mr. Bowman said. In 1921, only 44.2 per cent of Gettysburg's teachers had standard certificates or better.

10-Year Program

Much of Mr. Bowman's talk was based on the ten-year program of education for Pennsylvania established by Dr. James N. Rule, state secretary of public instruction. This program, he said, is based on three principles in education, efficiency, economy and equalization.

The immediate objectives of the ten-year program are:

"To reduce school costs so as to meet the current financial situation adequately and constructively and

Former Local Man Held In Frederick

James Banks, colored, near Emmitsburg, is in the Frederick jail in default of $300 bond, on a charge of selling liquor.

Banks was arrested in Emmitsburg Saturday night by Deputy Sheriff Albert Adelsberger following information that the accused had sold a pint of liquor to Gerald Ridge, near Emmitsburg, in the alley in the rear of C. G. Frailey's grocery store.

Ridge and Banks were taken to the office of Justice of the Peace J. Henry Stokes, by the deputy where evidence was placed against Banks.

Banks formerly resided near Gettysburg.

JOHN D. KEITH TELLS CLUB OF WET-DRY ISSUE

Traces History Of 18th Amendment And Cites Reasons For Adoption.

COMPARES PLANK OF TWO PARTIES

A discussion of the history of the eighteenth amendment and the causes leading to its adoption, together with a comparison of the planks of the republican and democratic parties, was given by John D. Keith, Esq., of Gettysburg, at the weekly meeting of the Rotary club at the Y. M. C. A., Monday evening. Frederic E. Griest, president of the club, presided.

Mr. Keith pointed out that under the constitution congress alone is given authority to regulate interstate commerce as applied to shipments of liquor.

"In 1847," Mr. Keith said, "the supreme court decided that in the absence of any regulation of interstate commerce by congress, each state could prohibit the importation of liquor. The law remained thus for 40 years during which many of the states adopted stringent laws regulating and prohibiting the sale and importation of liquor."

Wilson Act

"In 1888, the supreme court reversed its previous decision and held that a state had no authority to forbid the importation of liquor, and congress passed the Wilson act in 1890 under which liquor shipped into a state became subject to the law of that state upon its arrival at the state boundary."

"In 1898, the supreme court ruled that liquor did not arrive into a state until it reached the consignee and also ruled the consignee could resell it in the original package or container, thereby taking from the states the power to prohibit, tax or regulate the resale."

"Under such conditions, the states had, in fact, no power to exercise any of their sovereign states' rights on the liquor traffic problem, and consequently abuses arose. Practically all states were agreed that the only remedy available to give states the right to control the liquor traffic was through an amendment to the constitution."

"In 1913, congress passed the Webb-Kenyon bill which gave states full power over the importation of liquors when they reached state lines. This act was vetoed by President Taft on the ground that it was unconstitutional and unenforceable, and the general opinion was that the act was invalid. Nevertheless, congress repassed the act over the president's veto."

Move To Repeal

"Immediately shippers into so-called dry states started agitation to repeal the measure. Meanwhile various forms of amendments were submitted to congress and debated. The thought of all of them was that an amendment should be passed which gave states full control over the president's veto."

COUNTY MAN IN AUTO ACCIDENT

New Oxford Youth Crashes Into Parked Truck; Sleeping Driver Jailed.

A driver, whose sleep was not disturbed even when a sedan plowed into the rear of his parked truck along the Lincoln highway, four miles west of Chambersburg, Saturday night, is serving a five-day jail sentence for parking the truck without lights.

The truck driver, Newton Brown, of Thomasville R. 2, York county, and two companions were sound asleep when George Mumma, 21, of New Oxford R. 4, drove his car into the rear of the truck about 8:45 Saturday night.

Mumma said that he could not see the truck because of the darkness. He was extricated from the wreckage of his car and taken to the Chambersburg hospital by a passing autoist, H. L. Kudell, of Cincinnati, Ohio. At the hospital it was found that he was suffering from lacerations to the scalp and face and a possible fracture to the right knee cap. Mumma's car was damaged to the extent of $250.

An officer of the state highway patrol sub-station arrested Brown at the accident scene and arraigned him before Magistrate Shirley J. Zarger, of Stoufferstown, who imposed the jail sentence in default of fine and costs.

George R. Stumbaugh and Clarence Kline, both of York Springs, were Brown's companions.

J. S. ANNAN IS BURIED MONDAY

Native Of Emmitsburg And Well Known Here Passes Away In Hagerstown.

J. Stewart Annan, deputy collector of internal revenue for the district of western and southern Maryland, died at the Washington county hospital, Hagerstown, Saturday midnight from complications, aged 58 years. He had been ill about five weeks.

Mr. Annan was born March 9, 1874, at Emmitsburg, the son of James Cochran and Rose J. (Stewart) Annan. He received his education in the schools of Emmitsburg and later attended New Windsor academy, the Chambersburg academy and Lafayette college. After leaving college he managed large farms in the Emmitsburg district and was active in community interests. He served four years as county commissioner of Frederick county, being elected in 1907. He was also interested in the Emmitsburg water company and in the banking business. For about nine years he had been in federal service as deputy collector with headquarters in Hagerstown.

He was a member of the Presbyterian church. He was active in Masonry, being a member of Tylran lodge, A. F. and A. M., Knights Templar and the Mystic Shrine.

Besides his widow, Elizabeth Morrison Annan, he is survived by the following children: Margaret, Hagerstown; Jane, Baltimore, and sons: James Cochran, John Stewart, Jr., and William Morrison Annan, all of Hagerstown.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon, with burial in Emmitsburg.

Mr. Annan was well known in Gettysburg.

The bride is a granddaughter of George W. Barbehenn, Ortanna.

COAL OIL MAY BE SUSPICIOUS CLUE TO BLAZE

Police Investigating Fire Origin At Ray Miller Home This Morning.

EXPLOSION IS GIVEN AS CAUSE

Suspicious circumstances, state police said, in connection with a fire which did several hundred dollars damage to the interior of the home of Ray Miller, along the Lincoln highway, near Belmont school three miles west of here this morning, led the officers to bring Mrs. Miller to headquarters for questioning.

Fire Chief William G. Weaver, of the Gettysburg fire company, and several firemen noted several circumstances upon their arrival at the Miller home which aroused their suspicions.

According to Fire Chief Weaver, the fire apparently started from an explosion of a coal oil stove in the kitchen, where the major damage was done.

Fire Chief Weaver said he found a container about half full of coal oil in the hallway on the second floor. In a bedroom on the second floor, he said a batch of oil-saturated newspapers were discovered and on the cellar steps a quart bottle half full of coal oil was found.

Clothing Removed

Another circumstance which the fire chief recorded as unusual was that all bed clothing had been removed from beds and all bureau drawers were empty.

Firemen also found fire in the dining room, adjoining the kitchen. When they arrived, although Fire Chief Weaver said he did not know how fire had communicated with anything in the room.

Mrs. Miller told a reporter for The Gettysburg Times that she was in the cellar when the coal oil stove exploded, but that she did not hear the explosion. Two of the Millers' five children were playing in an outbuilding at the time, the other three being in school.

Damage Is $500

A Gettysburg insurance agent, who handled the policy for fire on the Miller home, was informed of the unusual circumstances by Fire Chief Weaver, and state police were notified at the suggestion of District Attorney John P. Butt, who also was on the scene.

Sergeant R. W. Frutich, of the local state police sub-station, brought Mrs. Miller to headquarters for questioning, but she was later released. Sergeant Frutich would not make any comment after questioning Mrs. Miller.

Mr. Miller, owner of the frame dwelling, was at work at the Gettysburg furniture factory at the time the fire was discovered.

Mrs. Miller said she had gone to the cellar to fix the fire in the furnace. She said that when she returned to the first floor, the house was filled with dense smoke. She said she immediately turned in an alarm for the Gettysburg fire company.

The fire company extinguished the blaze with chemicals. Damage was estimated at $500.

Dr. H. W. Hanson To Broadcast Wednesday

Dr. Henry W. A. Hanson, president of Gettysburg college, will deliver the first of a series of radio talks over station WORK, York, Wednesday morning at 11 o'clock.

Doctor Hanson will speak on "Why an Education?"

Other members of the college faculty will deliver radio talks over the same station during the next several months.

Auto Collides With Standard

No one was injured when a car driven by Norman Miller, Hampton, collided with a light standard at the southeast corner of Frederick street and Centennial avenue, Hanover, Monday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

Miller claims his car was sideswiped by a car that entered Frederick street from High street and was forced into the standard. The car alleged to have entered Frederick street was said to have been traveling at a high rate of speed, and to have failed to stop for the through traffic street. The license number of this car has been learned and the owner will be notified to appear in police court to answer charges.

WEATHER REPORT

Fire Destroys
Hunting Camp

The Orrtanna-Hanover hunting camp in the South mountains, three miles west of Orrtanna, was destroyed by fire, Sunday evening at 8:30 o'clock, with a loss estimated at $350, partly covered by insurance. The origin of the fire is undetermined. Several Hanover members of the club had been at the place on Sunday, but they said they extinguished all fires inside the building before they left.

The camp comprised two frame buildings, both of which were consumed together with their contents. The camp is 18 years old. C. A. Herring, Orrtanna, is the president.

DENIES PENDLETON BLAST

Norristown, Nov. 8 (AP)—In a statement Monday, William D. Ridgway, chairman of the board of county commissioners, denied charges made by Philip C. Pendleton, democratic candidate for congress, that a workman employed on highways had been laid off for refusal to remove a card, favorable to Pendleton, from his automobile. Letters exchanged by Ridgway and Pendleton were made public and the commissioners' head said the employee in question, living in Ardsley, had been laid off because the job on which he was employed had been finished. The name of the workman was not made public.

WAGE CLAIMS

Seventeen claims for unpaid wages amounting to $25,254.66 were reported to the bureau of industrial relations last month. A wage claim amounting to $2,100 involving ten persons was adjusted during the past month. Wages in this case were paid in full.

Express Appreciation Of Manner In Which Traffic Is Handled At Football Games.

"Put us down for a ten-dollar contribution to the fund with which to buy comfortable and adequate furniture for the quarters of the Gettysburg detachment of state police," C. E. Bilheimer, athletic director of Gettysburg college, told a representative of the Chamber of Commerce, which is sponsoring a movement to raise at least $250 to replace the worn out and antiquated furnishings of the troopers' quarters in the Topper building, on Baltimore street.

"Both the state police and the highway patrol have been cheerfully giving Gettysburg college splendid assistance in handling the motor traffic during our football games, and the least we can do to show our appreciation is to contribute in this small way to their comfort when off duty," Mr. Bilheimer said.

Only about $60 more is needed to reach the desired amount of $250 for new and necessary furniture. James B. Aumen, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said today, "There are no state funds available with which to buy furniture for the troopers' quarters here, and the comparatively small pay the troopers receive is not enough to permit them to buy new furniture out of their earnings. They are doing a good work for the community and we owe it to them to make them as comfortable as possible," Mr. Aumen added.

Two Colored
Meetings Monday

Colored residents of Gettysburg held the spotlight of political attention Monday night.

A large audience heard Dr. Ernest Lyons, of Baltimore, former U. S. consul general to Liberia, Africa, and now resident consul for Liberia to the United States, deliver an impassioned appeal to republican voters to support the G. O. P.

Doctor Lyons asserted that "all the achievements and privileges and benefits of the colored race are attributed to the republican party from whom derived the recognition we deserve 70 years ago."

In the colored Elks home democratic leaders feted the colored residents at a pig roast. A capacity audience attended the roast.

Candidates for office addressed both audiences.

Hoover-Roosevelt
Are Home To Vote

Sacramento, Calif., Nov. 8 (AP)—President Hoover arrived here at 8:30 a. m. today en route to his Palo Alto home to vote. A large crowd was assembled before the station to hear the president's non-political speech after which he was to head a short parade through the Sacramento business district.

Governor Rolph and a papery of friends boarded the president's special at Newcastle, California, an hour earlier to continue on with him to San Francisco.

A large detail of California state motor police waited at the Newcastle station as they had at an earlier stop at Auburn. Railroad men said the detail was following the course of the train by highway as a protection to the president.

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 8 (AP)—His campaign ended, Governor Roosevelt slept late today and had his breakfast in bed as his fellow countrymen trooped to the polls to vote him into the presidency or back to private life.

The democratic candidate later went for an automobile ride over his Hudson valley estate.

A mile away at Hyde Park where the candidate would cast his vote election officials awaited his arrival. It was a typical autumn gray day with heavy clouds hanging over the Catskill foothills across the river. But gay hunting and the drifting leaves on the village streets gave it brightness.

Hunger Threatens
Southern Country

Santiago, Chile (AP)—National and provincial authorities are making strenuous efforts to prevent the food situation from becoming worse before new crops relieve the grave scarcity of prime necessities.

In most of the provinces bread is scarce for days at a time, and even in Santiago province the loaves, by government order, are much coarser and darker than formerly.

White bread seemingly is something which may not return for a long time.

Much emphasis is being put upon increased acreage for food crops. The government hopes especially that grains soon will be abundant, though estimates of the yield are still in the uncertain stage.

Prices of most foods have been greatly increased, and there are complaints of profiteering and speculation. Arrests are made as fast as proof against the offenders can be obtained and, in addition, the authorities have wide powers of expropriation of all stocks.

CURTIS FREED
IN KIDNAP HOAX

Pays $1,000 Fine After Conference With New Jersey Judge.

Flemington, N. J., Nov. 8 (AP).—John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk, Virginia, boat manufacturer, who was convicted of obstructing justice last July for his part in the fruitless search for the kidnapped baby of Charles A. Lindbergh, went free Monday.

Judge Adam O. Robins suspended operation of a one-year prison sentence. Curtis then paid a $1,000 fine, shook hands with the judge and walked out free. He had been under bond pending appeal of his conviction.

The action of the court was ostensibly "in the interests of justice" and no other explanation was given in the hearing. A report that Curtis had given authorities valuable information in the Lindbergh case could not be confirmed.

Brief Hearing Is Held

First hint that any action was contemplated came with the arrival of Curtis from Norfolk Monday. For some time before the hearing he and his attorneys and attorneys for the prosecution were closeted with the judge. All the attorneys emerged later and Curtis was left alone with the judge.

The formal hearing followed. It was brief, and not more than ten persons were in the court room.

Lloyd Fisher, the attorney who defended Curtis at his trial, moved that the court consider a review of the judgment "in the interest of justice."

Assistant Attorney General Longan arose and said: "The state concurs in the motion and consents to the review."

local or imported liquor, as experience had shown that to leave this vital subject to congress was uncertain.

"The eighteenth amendment was originally intended and presented differs radically from its present form. As construed by the courts it is not as intended or anticipated. "The democratic platform pledges the party to outright repeal of the amendment. If this were done, the country would be placed in the same position as it was from 1888 to 1919, without the assurance of any state exercising those powers which all concede should be vested in the states. Regulation of the importation of liquor into states would still rest with congress and a law passed at one session could be repealed at a subsequent session.

"The republican plank, in effect, pledges a substitute for the eighteenth amendment under which any state could, if it so desired, prohibit the sale of local or importation of liquor without depending upon congressional action. And those states which desired to import and sell liquor could do so."

Many Out Of Work
Mr. Bowman pointed out that there are now between 8,000 and 9-000 teachers out of work in Pennsylvania, but warned that what constitutes an over-supply of teachers now, may, when business conditions improve, result in a deficiency of teachers as in 1921. When times are good, many teachers leave the profession, returning to teaching when times are bad, Mr. Bowman said. This year the turn-over of teachers in Pennsylvania was less than one-twentieth of the total be-jobs.

AUTOMOBILE PLUNGES
DOWN HILLSIDE IN CRASH

Pottsville, Nov. 8 (AP).—An automobile crashed into a truck and plunged down a hillside Monday, seriously injuring the driver, Daniel W. Snader.

The truck driver, Paul Read, employed by the Becker coal yards, was cut and bruised.

The accident occurred on the Reading-Pottsville highway. Police said Snader's machine skidded on the rain-covered road and hit the truck, which overturned in a ditch.
Read leaped as the machine upset.

Snader, a salesman, of Akron, Lancaster county, was removed to a hospital. His skull is fractured and he suffered numerous other injuries.

Police were undecided whether the death was accidental, but Dr.
Henry Weinberg, assistant medical examiner, listed it as a case of suicide. The surviving Miss Harbeck said her sister had been despondent recently but had not spoken of ending her life and left no note.

A Path To Paradise

By Coningsby Dawson

SYNOPSIS: To rescue Santa, whom he has loved since she was 16, from utter despondency, Clive marries her immediately after her divorce in Chicago from Dicky. Back in New York Clive's police is shaken by the knowledge that his employer feels a little sorry for him, and by the curiosity of a friend of Santa's, whom they met at the door of their hotel, about him and Santa. But Santa is full of plans to get settled—in an apartment of her own choosing.

Chapter 20

A MARRIAGE CONTRAST

She was awakened by the sound of bath-water. Peeping above the sheets, she was dazzled by a flood of spring sunshine. Lapping the window-sill stretched an abyss of blue. She hadn't felt so light-hearted since nursery days when, as now, she had had someone to take care of her.

Clive tiptoed from the bathroom tousle-headed, his every movement eloquent of his anxiety not to disturb her. She slipped back on the pillows, feigning to doze for the luxury of watching his consideration for her.

When he was fully dressed, he telephoned in a lowered voice to have his breakfast sent up. She contrived a yawn.

"You may have mine sent up, too."

"Awake? I hope I didn't—" "What was the idea?" she chaffed him. "Were you planning to sneak off without kissing me good-morning?"

"Everything I've heard or read about girls is sheer rubbish," said Clive.

"What have you heard or read?" Breakfast arrived. He drew the table to the bedside and waited on her, keeping track of the time by occasional glances at his wrist-watch.

Till he'd married he'd always heard, he confessed, that even the best of Santa's sex were double-crossers. Almost every novel taught that love was madness and marriage a trap. Lies of that sort!

"And what have you found, darling?" Santa cuddled her cheek against her velvety white shoulder. "If you could see yourself!" he spoke presently. "You're the most perfect thing, Santa. I have to tell you. You may think I'm piling up a lot of words. But here's what you are to me: you're the road to heaven."

He laughed self-consciously under scrutiny. "I feel so humble, Santa—so dull and ordinary. When I'm away from you, I want to run back because it doesn't seem true that you could have given yourself to me. Why did you, Santa?"

"Idiotic of me, wasn't it?" "Well, here's what I'm trying to say, darling. I don't know what will make you happy. Whatever it is, I'll get it for you. All my life I'll serve you. But at first, till I get forward, you must have patience."

Alone in the still room, she accused herself of play-acting. Being married was normal to her; to him it was all so amazing. How could a girl be married for the first time twice? That was the only miracle that would satisfy him. She watched, as an amused spectator, her attempts to play the timid bride.

If he were sensible instead of ignoring her experience, he ought to use it as a chart to the dangers to avoid. To have to appear to agree that they were the exception to mated couples cast a shadow of insincerity over all their relations. She retired herself slowly. It was a relief not to be watched. On one side of his nature Clive was a small child, intrusively curious. She'd forgotten that any man could be so innocent. She dreaded the day when she would disappoint him.

"Cheer up, little road to heaven," she addressed herself in the mirror. "The first man thought too lightly of you; the second thinks too highly. One dragged you down; the other drags you up. Gosh, you're hard to please!" Then applying a final touch of lipstick, "You certainly look ravishing."

She spent the rest of the day climbing stairs and mounting in elevators. Toward late afternoon, in Central West Park, she found the nest for which she was searching.

"I don't think I need consult my husband," she told the agent. "I'll close the deal now and pay you a deposit."

The man examined her check. "It's good," she smiled disarmingly. "And how about references, Madam?"

"I'm doing this as a surprise for my husband. If you looked up my references now—"

"You're newly married, Madam?" She beamed on him.

"On our honeymoon. How did you guess?" Then, gathering courage, "My husband works in New York. Our wedding presents and everything are still in Chicago. You won't mind, will you, if I send for them and get the furniture settled in before—well, before I introduce you to my husband?"

Santa had tasted forbidden fruit; she returned to face Clive aglow with this hidden knowledge. She was loving him in her own way—which was a wiser way than his, she was sure. If she couldn't sprout wings and wear the snow-white muslin of an angel, she could at least put a rief over his head. She owed him so much.

At the hotel-desk when she inquired for the key to her room, she was informed that her husband had already taken it.

Clive opened to her tap.

"Darling, you look glorious. What on earth have you been doing? I've been waiting for you an hour."

As he unfastened the fur from about her neck and relieved her of her jacket, she assumed her most artless and entranced expression.

"Been walking through the spring. Been telling myself I'm alive. Been telling myself the most wonderful fairy-tale—that you're my husband."

She hummed to herself as he went on his knees before her. She hummed to prevent herself from crying. Her heart was swelling.

What had she done to deserve such devotion—this knightly figure ministering to her? She was a hard-boiled little bit of fluff whom God had created beautiful. Tomorrow she would wire to Chicago for the furniture. What fun she'd have arranging a home for him!

She read everything that was passing in his mind. She wouldn't have found him absurd if he could have brought to their union an equal freshness.

"Sit here," she commanded. When he had occupied her chair, she plumped herself in his lap with the coyness of a flapper. "You think I'm cold. I'm not. I'm astounded. You're so different from other husbands."

The old subject, Dicky, popping up like a jack-in-the-box! "You're afraid of something," he accused her.

"Of ridicule. I couldn't bear that anyone should laugh at us. You have the oddest power over me."

"How odd?" "Away from you I'm business-like. The moment I'm with you, I long to be foolish."

"But you're ashamed of being foolish even when we're alone."

She hid her face in the hollow of his neck. "Ashamed that the past ever happened."

The evening following, on his return from the office, Clive paused at the hotel news-stand to buy a paper. A bell-boy touched his arm, informing him that a lady was waiting to see him. He found her discreetly parked behind a collection of palms. Her face seemed familiar, but in her street-clothes he failed to recognize her. She addressed him indignantly.

"It's a scandal what you're doing to Santa."

He was taken aback. "And pray, what am I doing?" Clive's tone became icy.

"But haven't you any manhood? When her husband finds out—"

"I get you," Clive laughed to conceal his annoyance. "But I think you owe me an explanation."

"You're right. Two nights ago I'd been dining and dancing in the restaurant downstairs—"

Clive cut her short. "Now I remember you. You're the girl who held the revolving door against us as we were passing out. You mean well—that's why I trouble to talk to you. Santa divorced Dak; Dak didn't divorce her. So I wasn't the correspondent. I have every right to be with her."

"By golly!" In her relief the girl clutched his arm. "Are you telling me you're married?"

"Scarcely anybody knows it. Even her parents don't. If you're anxious to make mischief—"

"Don't be an idiot. If there's nothing phony, why not publish your secret?"

Suddenly Clive glimpsed an ally. "Come upstairs and say that to Santa."

The girl twisted on her heel. "I've had enough of playing the good Samaritan."

(Copyright, 1931-1932, Coningsby Dawson)

Santa is on pins and needles for fear Clive, tomorrow, will balk at her great plan.

Envoy To Poland

F. Lamont Bell of Washington and Waverly, Pa., was appointed ambassador to Poland.

Football's eminent statistician and fact-finder, Parke H. Davis, of Easton, Pa., credits Walter Heffelfinger of Yale with being the first guard to pull out of the line and lead the interference. This was back in 1890 and was first used in the Yale-Princeton game played Thanksgiving Day, November 27, 1890.

William H. Lewis of Harvard was the first center that he saw use the roving style of play on defense. Alonzo Stag, however, stated in his book some years ago that he employed a loose center when he was coaching at Springfield in 1890. George Woodruff of Pennsylvania is credited with inventing the guards back formation and of using smashing ends with the center backing up the line.

Stagg's Inventions

A. A. Stagg has contributed as many innovations to the game as, if not more than, any other coach. He is given credit for being the first to use, back in 1890, plays with the ends back of the line. He was also one of the first to employ the principle of the shift.

He was one of the first, if not the first, to use the double pass with the forward pass. A few years ago he developed a flanker play and this year he has a very interesting back-field shift that is original with him.

Glenn Warner is credited with first using the crouch start, the clipping block, the single and double wing-back formations and the modern reserves.

Fielding H. Yost has originated many plays that are now commonly used in football. Back in 1901 he used a back in the same way that the "tail-back" is used these days.

He has always used, off and on, the nine man line on offense and was the first to devise a simple signaling system. In his book printed back in 1905 he describes a spiral pass which was probably the first publicity given to this type of pass.

Remembers Heffelfinger

In his book on "American Football," W. M. Weyand, captain of West Point's 1915 team, refers to one of the points made by Parke Davis, as follows:

"In the Princeton game, (Yale's) great guard, Heffelfinger, was used to come out of the line to head the interference. In this manner McClung scored four touchdowns and Morrison made a 70-yard run for another."

Ralph D. Paine, the author, was a substitute on the 1890 Yale team. Princeton's captain was Edgar Allan Poe, later attorney-general of the state of Maryland and one of six brothers who made gridiron history with the Tigers.

It was in the same year that Army and Navy played their first game, won easily by the Midshipmen. Army's team, its first, was organized and captained by Dennis Michie who was killed at San Juan Hill in Cuba and in whose memory the present stadium stands at West Point.

Aprpos of the poll we will take later, on the same subject and after more time and more returns have been permitted, a curious reader in Brockton, Massachusetts, wants to have at least a partial list of the year's outstanding sports performances listed for examination and, no doubt, argument.

Here are a few that can be put down off-hand in more or less chronological order:

1. Malcolm Campbell's record automobile speed run at Daytona Beach.

2. The California crew's unbeatsweep of all the eight-oared competition, from Poughkeepsie and Worcester to the Olympic lagoon at Long Beach.

3. Elsworth Vines' winning tennis campaigns at Wimbledon and Forest Hills, crowning him the world champion for 1932, at the age of only 20.

4. Gene Sarazen's record triumphs in the British and American Open golf tournaments, climaxed with a final round of 66 at Fresh Meadow.

5. Mill Carr's trio of record-cracking races against Ben Eastman on the coast, concluding with the Olympic 400.

Consider The Babe

6. Babe Didrikson's remarkable all-around track performances in the national championships, where she topped all rivals in a half dozen events, and the Olympics, where she set two world records.

7. Jim Bausch's world record victory over the Finns in the Olympic decathlon.

8. Eddie Tolan's double sprint triumph in the big international jamboree.

9. The sensational advance of Japan's masculine swimmers, who carried off the Olympic honors from the U. S. A. for the first time.

10. The season's batting exploits of Jimmie Foxx, including an output of 58 homers.

11. Babe Ruth's dramatic home run outburst against the Cubs in the third game of the world series.

Tulane, the victim of Auburn's come-back this year, was the only major team in the country to finish its regular 1931 campaign undefeated or untied. Subsequently the Greenies were deprived of the distinction by losing a sensational battle with Southern California in the Rose Bowl classic on New Year's Day, 1932.

The unbeaten list has been rapidly reduced so far this season, with the process in a fair way to being completed by the end of November, with the aid of a few upsets.

Auburn in the south, Colgate in the east, Michigan and Notre Dame in the middle west and Southern California in the far west appear to have the best chances of keeping their slates clean.

Two of them, however, Notre Dame, and U. S. C., will have a big get-together at Los Angeles, December 10, with fireworks aplenty to set off, if each happens to have kept from being bowled over meanwhile.

One of Notre Dame's big intervening hurdles will be Army, November 26, in the Yankee stadium. If this game doesn't pack 'em in, none will this season.

RECORD FOOTBALL CROWDS

San Antonio, Tex. (AP)—Colleges may mean about football attendance, but not Brackenridge high school of San Antonio. Instituting night play for part of its games, the school set apart new marks for crowds and gate receipts this season.

Jimmy Hitchcock and Ripper Williams, Auburn football players, were All-Dixie league baseball stars last season.

THE HUNTER HUNTED!

"Nature in the Raw"—as portrayed by the famous artist, R. Atkinson Fox... inspired by the battle between an enraged bull buffalo and the savage Indian hunters whose lances roused the beast to furious charge. "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—and raw tobaccos have no place in cigarettes.

No raw tobaccos in Luckies —that's why they're so mild

WE buy the finest, the very finest tobaccos in all the world—but that does not explain why folks everywhere regard Lucky Strike as the mildest cigarette. The fact is, we never overlook the truth that "Nature in the Raw is Seldom Mild"—so these fine tobaccos, after proper aging and mellowing, are then given the benefit of that Lucky Strike purifying process, described by the words—"It's toasted". That's why folks in every city, town and hamlet say that Luckies are such mild cigarettes.

Just Folks

NEIGHBORING
I remember when a boy that my mother used to say:
"Mind the house a little while, for I won't be long away.
I'm just going 'cross the street for perhaps an hour or two;
Mrs. Smith is very ill and I'll see what I can do."
No one of us had money then, so when trouble came about,
Neighbors up and down the street had to help each other out.

I have watched her many a time stirring custard or a cake For the dainty bit of food which some invalid could take.
And when sickness came to us so the neighbors rallied 'round:
For the burdens we must bear many a helping hand we found.
But our fortunes rose and rose and we ceased to play the friend,
And we ceased to look for help, having money we could spend.

When whatever people wish they possess the coin to buy for There is very little left for the neighbors to supply.
When for hospital attention there is money in the purse, Kindly women on the street one another needn't nurse.
Thus with wealth at every hand and with rising bonds and shares
We raced blindly on our way, each about his own affairs.

But we're back to simpler ways, and the mothers more and more Will go slipping 'cross the street to some troubled neighbor's door.
And they'll help to nurse the sick and they'll stir up custards, too.
In the same unselfish way that our mothers used to do.
Oh, we've had our fling at wealth,
now we're back to living plain,
Back to all that friendship means,
back to neighboring again.

COMFORT

"Let something good be said!" a sage
Of some almost forgotten age,
No doubt of light a moment dark,
Let fall that very apt remark.
Now when a golfer coming in Says with a brave but foolish grin,
"The trees with beauty were afame!"
I know he's lost another game.

And when a golfer homeward bound Remarks to me, with look profound,
"Twas good to be with three such men!"
I know he's off his drive again.

So when the students' football dream
Is shattered by the rival team
They tell, emerging from the stand:
"Well, anyhow we've got a band!"

"We lost the game! But what of that Didn't see our tall drum major's hat?
At playing sprightly college airs
We have a band excelling theirs!"

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

GETTING UNDER WAY

ONE of the most important tasks of this life is to get under way. Not always is it possible to get under way in the exact direction and exact manner that we should, but when well under way itself, much comes to us, much is revealed to us, much is made plain.

We usually gain that which we most desire—provided, of course, that we get under way for that objective!

The study of any successful life is always interesting and instructive.
What a variety of jobs, experiences, disappointments, discouragements, losses finally bring us near to our goal.

It is difficult to get under way, however, if we don't know where we are going, or what it is that we desire to accomplish. Nothing is ever achieved without a definite plan.

Unemployment, with all its discouraging and distressing aspects, would be far less serious in the world had those now out of employment pursued a plan, had an objective, and looked ahead during more favorable times. We are all at fault for much of the distress of the world at the present time. But nothing is gained from blame. The object for us all should be to get under way—to go forward, to instill movement into a stagnant world.

Nothing should be ruthlessly torn down until something better has been evolved to take its place.

I had a talk with a taxi driver the other day on my way to a railroad station in a big city. I noted that I had an intelligent driver and so inquired into his life. It seemed that he had lost a large sum of money and, having a family, took the first job that offered. That man was getting under way in a most honorable manner.

Some of our greatest manufacturers, who are putting into practice the plan of reducing the number of days of work to their present employees and taking on the unemployed for an extra day, are to be greatly commended. That is a practical plan for getting under way toward better times.

"GREATLY DARK"

WHO is he who really knows any of us exactly as we are? A sealed secret of conduct, purpose, and idealism is carried about by us all within the most sacred chamber of our being.

Stevenson, in his essay on Robert Burns, ends that discourse with these words: "Alas! I fear every man and woman of us is 'greatly dark' to all their neighbors, from the day of birth until death removes them, in their greatest virtues as well as in their saddest faults."

Our voice may be thrown across the seven seas—and he returned to us. The mysterious ether is able to bring to us matchless tones of beauty and wonder from stringed instruments thousands of miles away as we sit comfortably in our homes—but no one yet has been able to fathom the human heart to that secret chamber or to reveal motives.

All our lives we remain not only "greatly dark" to those who love us most, and who are most willing to forgive us our faults and shortcomings, but to ourselves we remain much of a mystery!

We do foolish and unreasonable things that only come back to plague and distress us. We pay double price for happiness and even for success itself. We hurt our dearest friends, and the hurt returns to wound us the greater.

Is there anything in this world more important than to think kindly and with tolerant care?

A political contest always distresses me. Men high in private esteem suddenly become (while opponents) dangerous enemies to the state and to mankind! Ambition mounts courtesy and fairness and screeches alarm and catastrophe. And truth becomes as battered as a caught thief.

It is well that time heals so well and teaches so thoroughly. Robert Herrick, in his beautiful story "The Master of the Inn," brings this out in a remarkably luminous manner.

Most of us learn, sooner or later, that far better than speaking gently and carrying a big stick, is to think gently and kindly and carry a tolerant heart.

About New York

By William Gaines

New York—The final passing of vaudeville from the Palace leaves no heaven for vaudevillians on this earth.

Maybe in time they will find reason to think of the new music hall in Rockefeller center as a sort of second heaven, but it can never be a second Palace.

For 19 years, to play the Palace was the dream of every tank town trouper. It was the crowning experience of a vaudeville's life—sufficient compensation for all the heartbreaks of show business.

The Palace was opened March 24, 1913, by Martin Beck. He saw the house become a flourishing institution, then retired from vaudeville for 10 years.

Last spring feature pictures were wedged into the Palace program, but an interlude of variety was retained. Since then there have been occasional hints that the former policy of two "vaude" bills a day, with reserved seats, might be restored.

But finances, not sentiment, govern in the show world. The Palace, with living actors on the stage, has been running "in the red" too long —so say the generalissimos of big time vaudeville.

The heaviest blow to the Palace came when the huge Broadway movie houses, a couple of years ago, began offering incidental stage shows with more big "flesh" attractions than the smaller Palace seated able to muster for its principal form of entertainment.

Big vaudeville names have been demanding $5,000, $8,000 and such figures for a week at the Palace.
There are only 1,735 seats in the house, and the management says it couldn't meet the competing bills of the theaters where popular prices prevailed.

Bulls Die Promptly

Benito Collada, the Greenwich Village restaurateur, grew a bit restless awaiting the arrival of a prominent visitor from Spain. He plumped himself down at a table with some up-towners.
"It's always this way in Spain," he complained. "People late. Nothing happens on time over there except the bullfights. They start right on the dot, at 4 o'clock in Valencia, 4:30 in Madrid and 5 in Seville. The people are never late for the fights."

Collada was off on the subject of bullfights, and when he gets off there's no stopping him.

During the summer, when Collada was in Spain, he took his motion picture camera to the ring and filmed some fights. He'll screen the pictures for you with practically no encouragement.

In a little while the expected visitor arrived. Collada went to

GENERAL WHIPPLE EXPIRES IN WEST

Los Angeles, Nov. 8 (AP)—
Brigadier General Charles H. Whipple, retired, who figured in many thrilling episodes in the pioneer life of the west, died Sunday of pneumonia at the age of 83.

General Whipple was stricken a week ago, a few days after returning to his Hollywood home from visiting a son in Brooklyn.

Born in Adams, New York, the son of Bishop Henry B. Whipple, known as the apostle to the Indians, he was cashier of a Minnesota bank for ten years before the lure of army life overtook him. His first appointment was a major paymaster.

While carrying a payroll of $30,000 to an army encampment in Montana, bandits held up the stage.
The guard was killed and the stage driver wounded, but Whipple took to the underbrush with the money and escaped.

Wife Sole Survivor Of Motorboat Mishap

Fort Frances, Ont., Nov. 8 (AP)—
Mrs. Eyrer Peterson, of Chicago, was brought in here Sunday terrified and half hysterical by Indians who had rescued her from an isolated island in Lake in the Woods, where she had spent a night and a day without food or shelter after her husband, their two daughters and their guide had been drowned.

They had set out Thursday night in an outboard motorboat for a tourist camp five miles from Nester Falls, she said. A strong wind blew up; the boat was swamped and all its occupants thrown into the cold water. Mr. Peterson and the two girls drowned. Mrs. Peterson managed to reach the island from which she was rescued after a night and a day by Indians passing in a canoe.

Denis Chabot, former American actor and owner of the camp for which they were bound, was also drowned. He was acting as guide to the party.

AUTO KILLS EVANGELIST AS HE WALKS TO CHURCH

Doylestown, Nov. 8—An automobile driven by Alvin M. Moyer, 32, of this place, Sunday killed the Rev.
David A. Blackburn, 43, evangelist, while on his way to conduct services at the Church of God, near Plumsteadville.

Mr. Blackburn was walking across the Lackawanna Trail, when he was struck by Moyer's car, headed toward Doylestown. His home was in Clitheroe, Lancashire, England, until recently. He is survived by his mother, living in London.

Moyer was released under bail pending the inquest by Dr. John Sweeney, county coroner.

The body was removed to the Leator morgue, where a friend arranged for the funeral service to be held at the Church of God.

THREATENS NEW FAST

Bombay, Nov. 8 (AP)—Mahatma Gandhi, nationalist leader, threatened to renew his recent fast "unto death" unless the recently negotiated pact of Poona is carried out completely by caste Hindus. The threat came from Poona jail, where Gandhi has been many months. He is said to have fully recovered from the effects of his previous fast.

Gandhi now threatens to renew his fast on New Year's Day unless the famous Hindu temple at Guru-vayoor, a stronghold of orthodoxy, is considered unlikely the trustees will yield to his ultimatum.

GIVES BRIEFLY SYSTEM'S AIMS

Six Points Cited In Outlining Aim Of State Education System.

Provisions of Pennsylvania school laws and the mandate of the state constitution relating the free public education, condensed into six brief statements totaling 142 words, were announced today by Dr. James N. Rule, state superintendent of public instruction.

"Pennsylvania's Educational Charter" has been framed to present the obligations of the commonwealth in providing education for its citizens, he said, and provides the essentials of a thorough and efficient system of schools.

Have Possibilities

"No school system can function in the best interests of the public unless it is supported by adequate legislation," he added. "Our educational charter shows that Pennsylvania can have schools that rank with the best in the country. Perfect score schools carry out each and every one of the six points in this charter. It is an existing foundation for the development of Pennsylvania's ten-year program of education. First active steps in this direction will be taken at the education congress to be held in Harrisburg next week when a program of constructive economy in school administration is to be considered."

Pennsylvania's educational charter reads as follows:

1.—For every child in Pennsylvania protection of his constitutional right to an education.

2.—For every child an understanding, competent teacher.

3.—For every child an adaptable education program — instruction and practice in how to become a competent citizen — training and guidance to do some part of the world's work well — activities for the development of worthy home membership, wise use of leisure time, health, culture and character.

4.—For every child a school term sufficient in length to enable him to profit to the full extent of his capacities from opportunities offered by education.

5.—For every child safe, sanitary, hygienic and properly equipped school buildings and grounds.

6.—For every citizen of the commonwealth provision to a continuing education—to make up for opportunities lost in earlier years and to provide means whereby the individual may adjust himself to new civic, social and economic responsibilities.

STATE WORKERS DEFY "ALFALFA BILL" EDICT

Oklahoma City, Nov. 8 (AP).—The spirit of revolt—and nothing else—warmed Oklahoma's state house.

Rebelling against Governor Murray's two-day holiday proclamation, employees in several departments, headed by the governor's political foes, went to work bundled in coats and furs.

Murray's enemies charged the holiday was declared so appointive officials might campaign for "Alfalfa Bill's" initiative bill to revise income taxes. When the department heads decided to go to work Monday, Murray had the heat turned off and only one elevator was running. Today—election day—also is a holiday.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S HOME IN CALIFORNIA

In his final plea to voters to return him to the White House, President Hoover campaigned along the way from Washington to his home in Palo Alto, Cal., where he arrives on election day in time to cast his ballot. It was here that he received the news of his overwhelming victory in 1928. (Associated Press Photo)

PROSPECTORS FLY TO SCENE OF GOLD STRIKE

Senneterre, Que., Nov. 8 (AP).—Gold prospectors were winging their way Monday toward Lake Obaska, Tibemont township, where a gold strike was reported. Wasting no time, most of the prospectors took airplanes as soon as the news spread that a prospector had discovered a vein forty feet wide with considerable free gold. Obaska lake is northwest of the rich Pascalls and Louvicourt mines.
